1	Mon Oct 26 · Thinking of selling in Vancouver? Good selling strategy starts before the listing goes live. Pricing, preparation and presentation have to work together. Our process includes complimentary home staging, current market analysis and clear guidance from the first conversation through completion. 2	Wed Oct 28 · Sellers Notes The paperwork you gather before listing decides how smoothly the sale closes. Title, survey, permits, warranties and strata records are far easier to collect now than during a five-day subject window with a buyer waiting. • Title search and any registered charges • Permits and receipts for past work • Strata minutes, bylaws and financials A prepared file removes the reasons a deal stalls. Getting ready to list? Let's build the document package together. 3	Fri Oct 30 · Home & Design Materials tell the truth about a renovation. Solid hardware, honest stone, properly hung doors and clean tile transitions signal a build that was not rushed. Thin veneers and filler at the edges say the opposite, whatever the listing photos suggest. Quality shows up at the edges, where shortcuts hide. Assessing a renovation? Let's look at the details together. 4	Mon Nov 2 · More choice. More leverage. Better decisions. More choice gives Vancouver buyers room to compare carefully, negotiate thoughtfully and make decisions with greater confidence. That means looking beyond list price to condition, monthly costs, location, future resale and the seller's position. The advantage is not simply having more listings. It is having the time and context to recognize the right opportunity. 5	Wed Nov 4 · Client Testimonial Selling a home after you have already moved away takes careful coordination, all of it managed from a distance. Thank you, Brad, for trusting us with your sale and for taking the time to share your experience. 6	Fri Nov 6 · Sellers Notes A buyer forms an opinion before they reach the front door. The walk from the sidewalk sets the tone for everything after it. Trimmed edges, a clean entry, exterior lights that work and a door that opens smoothly quietly promise that the rest of the home was cared for too. • Clean, defined edges and a swept path • Exterior lights that all work • A front door and hardware in good order The first impression is made outside. Preparing your home for market? Let's start at the sidewalk together. 7	Mon Nov 9 · The best sale starts before you list. The best preparation is selective, not expensive for the sake of it. A few well-chosen repairs, better lighting, edited furniture and thoughtful staging can help Vancouver buyers understand a home more quickly. We focus on what will shape their impression and skip work unlikely to change the result. 8	Wed Nov 11 · Buyer Notes Three ages matter more than most of the feature list. The roof, the furnace and the hot water tank each have a predictable service life and a predictable replacement cost. Knowing where each one sits turns a vague worry into a number you can plan around. • Roof: age, material and last repair • Furnace: age and service history • Hot water tank: age and capacity Know the ages, and the surprises stop being surprises. 9	Fri Nov 13 · Buyer Notes Some older Vancouver lots are hiding an oil tank. Many homes built before natural gas was common were heated with oil, and some of those tanks were left in the ground. A scan costs far less than a removal, and a leaking tank can bring soil remediation with it. • A tank scan before subjects are removed • Removal records and any soil test results • Clarity on who pays if a tank is found Look below the lawn before you fall for the porch. Considering an older home? Let's plan the right checks together. 10	Mon Nov 16 · Buy first or sell first? Buying first gives you more control over where you are going, but creates more financial exposure. Selling first gives you budget certainty, but may leave less flexibility for your next purchase. The right order depends on your financing, current home, housing needs and tolerance for uncertainty. 11	Wed Nov 18 · Client Testimonial A first home, an offer in a busy situation and a move-in within a month of the listing. Thank you, Joséphine, for sharing your experience. Buying your first home should feel this way: clear advice on the offer, and help from start to finish. 12	Fri Nov 20 · Sellers Notes Paint is the cheapest square foot you will ever upgrade. Scuffed trim, dated accent walls and patchy touch-ups tell a buyer the home needs work before they have even seen the kitchen. A fresh, consistent neutral resets every room for a fraction of the cost of any other improvement. • Walls and trim in one calm, consistent palette • Ceilings refreshed where they have yellowed • Doors and baseboards touched up last Fresh paint makes every other feature look better. Getting ready to list? Let's plan the finishing touches together. 13	Mon Nov 23 · The highest offer isn't always the strongest. An offer is a package, not a single number. Price matters, but so do the deposit, conditions, completion and possession dates, and the buyer's ability to complete. The strongest offer delivers the best overall result with risk you understand. 14	Wed Nov 25 · Home & Design Which way the windows face changes the whole day. South-facing rooms hold the light through Vancouver's grey winters, north-facing rooms stay even and cool, and west-facing ones catch the warmth of the late afternoon. Orientation shapes heating, comfort and how a home feels in every season. Visit at the time of day you will actually live there. Fri Nov 27 · Buyer Notes

Arrange your insurance before possession, not after.

Lenders typically ask for proof of home insurance before they release the mortgage funds, and the policy needs to be in place from the moment the property becomes yours. Strata owners should carry their own unit policy on top of the building's coverage.

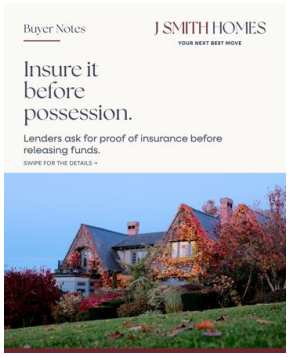

• A quote booked as soon as subjects are removed
• Proof of insurance sent to your lender and lawyer
• Contents and liability cover ready for move-in day

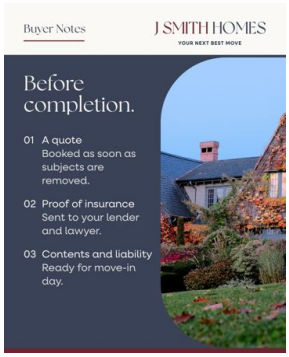

Sort the policy early and completion day stays calm.

Planning your completion? Let's map out the timeline together.

Mon Nov 30 · What you see: the condo. What you're buying into: the building.

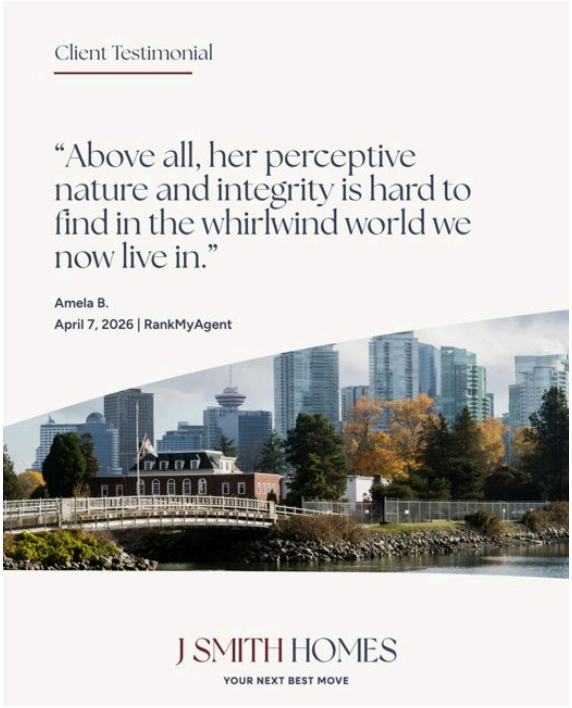

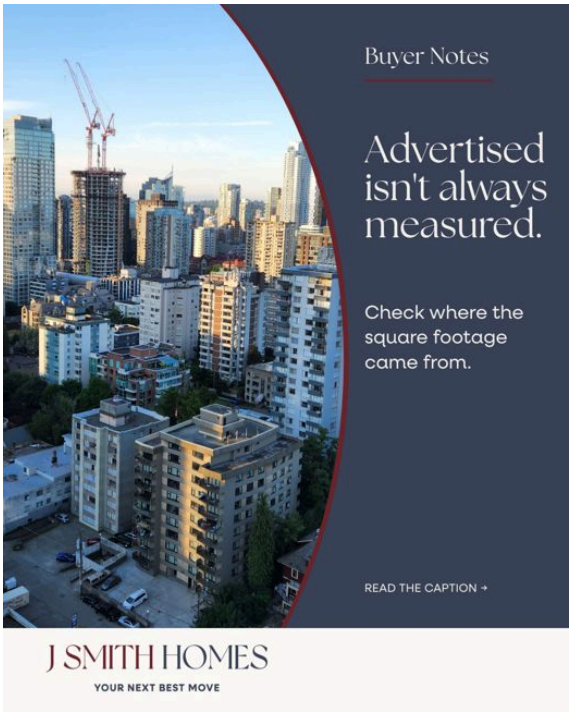

A condo's finishes tell you about the unit. The strata documents tell you about the building.

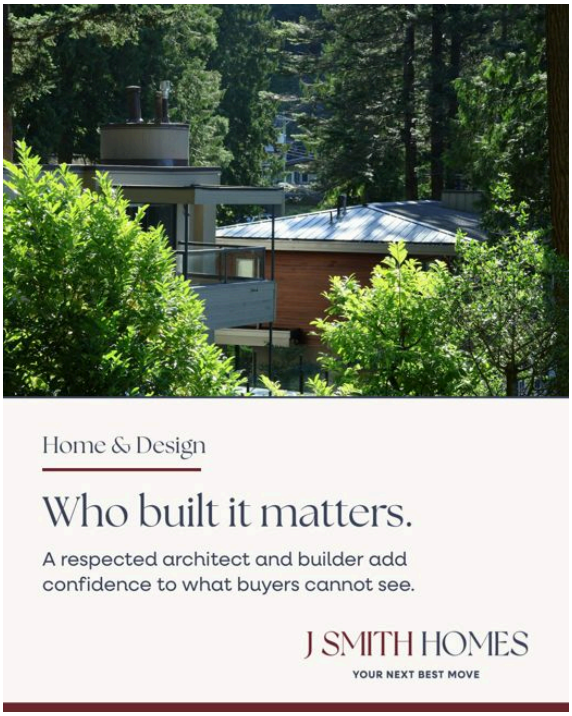

Before buying in Vancouver, review the Form B, budget, contingency reserve fund, depreciation report, minutes, insurance, planned work and potential special levies. You are buying the home and a share of the building's future.

17	Wed Dec 2 · Client Testimonial Some clients we work with once. Others we come to know over many years. Thank you, Amela, for your trust over the better part of a decade, and for your kind words about your sale. 18	Fri Dec 4 · Buyer Notes Advertised square footage is not always measured square footage. Listing figures can come from strata plans, older records or a previous owner's estimate, and different methods count walls, stairs and balconies differently. A gap of even a few percent changes the price per square foot you are actually paying. • Where the listed figure came from • Whether it includes balconies or storage • A professional measurement when it matters Compare homes on the same measure. Weighing two similar homes? Let's compare them properly together. 19	Mon Dec 7 · Happy where you are? You do not need to be planning a move to ask a real estate question. A renovation, property assessment or future plan can benefit from a clearer view of value and timing. Sometimes good advice leads to a move. Sometimes it confirms that staying put makes sense. 20	Wed Dec 9 · Home & Design The architect and the builder are part of the value. At the upper end of the market, a home's origins carry weight. A respected designer, a builder with a record of quality and a documented build history give buyers confidence that the details beneath the surface match the ones they can see. Provenance is a feature worth presenting. Fri Dec 11 · Buyer Notes

Negotiate the inclusions, not just the price.

Appliances, window coverings, light fixtures and even the garage fridge can all be part of the deal. Items that are not clearly written into the contract can leave on moving day, and a few well-chosen inclusions can bridge a small gap on price.

• Appliances listed by item, not "all appliances"
• Window coverings and light fixtures confirmed
• Anything you assume stays, written down

What is written down is what stays.

Preparing an offer? Let's get every term on paper together.
